Your Future in Food

Food Processing Pathways Information Session

Looking for a career in the food industry? Planning is underway to deliver the Certificate III in Food Processing in 2025 at the Barossa Regional University Campus. Backed by the Australian Food Training Centre and Food South Australia, this nationally accredited qualification is recognised throughout Australia's food industry, offering the skills needed for a long-term career or further studies.

During this session, you'll hear directly from the Australian Food Training Centre and some of the most respected local food businesses, including: Careme, Relish the Barossa, Wiech's Barossa Valley Egg Noodles, Maggie Beer, and Barossa Valley Cheese Company. These companies will discuss the career pathways they are creating for local students and the support they provide through the program.

The Certificate III in Food Processing would be designed to offer hands-on training and career pathways in food processing, addressing a critical gap in local training that was previously only available by commute to Regency TAFE.

- The course is delivered under the oversight of FoodSA, South Australia's peak body for food producers.
- You'd gain hands-on experience through a 12-month traineeship with local businesses
- No prior experience is required—just a passion to learn.
- You'll be assessed through assignments throughout the year with no exams and will have access to learner supports, both from the businesses you work with and externally.

Seats for this free information session are limited. Register to secure your spot and take the first step towards a rewarding career in food processing!
